CONCLUSIONS: The results of this study suggest that the use of a single, standardized, and validated questionnaire is a feasible and reliable method for assessing the prevalence of self-reported SLE in a community-based sample. The prevalence of self-reported SLE was 1.2% in the community-based sample. The prevalence of self-reported SLE was higher in the sample of patients with rheumatoid arthritis than in the community-based sample. The prevalence of self-reported SLE was higher in the sample of patients with rheumatoid arthritis than in the community-based sample.
