ANNEX 1

[illegible]

For long, expatriation has been considered a "last resort" for those who have lost faith in their country of origin. It is a process that has been used by a small number of people, and it is often associated with a sense of despair or hopelessness. However, in recent years, there has been a growing number of people who are choosing to expatriate for a variety of reasons, including a desire for a better quality of life, a change of career, or a desire to escape a difficult situation in their home country. This has led to a re-evaluation of the process and a growing acceptance of it as a viable option for those who are seeking a new beginning.

1. The first of these is the fact that the United States has a long history of intervention in the affairs of other countries. This has been done in the name of democracy, but it has also been done in the name of self-interest. The United States has intervened in the affairs of other countries in order to protect its own interests, and this has often been done in a way that has been harmful to the people of those countries.
